

Kaylon Day is a Governmental Affairs Associate at the Association County Commissioners of Georgia (ACCG), advocating for the state's 159 counties under the Gold Dome and beyond. Her policy area, General County Government, covers areas such as land use/zoning, housing, constitutional officers, elections, procurement, and local operations. Previously, Kaylon served as a Legislative Assistant in the Georgia State Senate, managing legislation for multiple Senate Committees, including Senate Health & Human Services, Senate Natural Resources & the Environment, and Senate State & Local Government Operations. She has also interned in research roles with ACCG and the U.S. House of Representatives. Kaylon spent several years in the banking industry as a Senior Teller before further exploring her passion for public service. She holds a Master's in Public Administration from the University of Georgia and a B.A. in Political Science from Valdosta State University, her hometown college.
