

Khaia Gibson is a dedicated community leader from Macon, Georgia, passionate about revitalization, service, and creative advocacy. She currently serves as the Office Manager for the Macon-Bibb County Land Bank Authority, where she supports efforts to restore and repurpose underutilized properties for community growth and sustainability.

In addition to her work in local government, Khaia is the Board Secretary and Project Manager for the Veteran Art Society, a nonprofit organization that empowers veterans through art, wellness, and community engagement. Her leadership helps drive initiatives that support veterans' mental health and reintegration through creative expression and outreach.

Recognized for her commitment to community innovation, Khaia was honored as a Knight Emerging City Champion in 2025, a distinction that highlights her role in shaping a more connected and inclusive Macon.
